2. Provide a copy of the mission statement (charge) for your committee, which has guided your work:

Please see attached.

3. Comment on the usefulness of the mission statement in guiding your work. What should be included or deleted?

As part of the tenth-year review of the Study Abroad Programs Committee (formerly the Foreign Study Programs Committee), the mission statement was revised in May 2013. This new mission statement is an accurate representation of the work done by the committee.

4. Briefly summarize the major work accomplished by your committee this academic year:

The SAPC approved 9 new programs during 2015-16, and reviewed 15 existing programs. Programs are reviewed every three to four years, unless the committee finds reason to review them more or less frequently. The results of this year's reviews are to be found in the following list.

The following programs were reviewed in 2015-16 and judged satisfactory by the SAPC. They will be reviewed again on the following schedules:

Five-Year Review. The SAPC recommended that the following programs be reviewed in five years (during the 2020-21 academic year):

- England, London (GEO Center Site)
- Galway, Ireland (USAC)
- Perth, Australia (Curtin University Exchange)
- Melbourne, Australia (La Trobe University Exchange)

Three-Year Review. The SAPC recommended that the following programs be reviewed in three years (during the 2018-19):

- Ecuador, Bioregional Community Development
- Rosario, Argentina (GEO Center Site)
- Rapa Nui, Easter Island Research
- Japan, Senshu University Exchange
- England, Cambridge Liberal Arts
- Taiwan, National Taiwan University Exchange

Two-Year Review. The SAPC recommended that the following program be reviewed in two years (during the 2017-18):

- Zanzibar, Intensive Swahili
- Fes, Morocco Arabic Language
- Vienna, Segovia Journalism

One-Year Review. The SAPC recommended that the following program be reviewed in one year (during the 2016-17)

- South Korea, Hanyang University Exchange

Terminated Programs:

None.

New-Program Proposals:

Approved programs: After careful deliberation, the committee approved the following new overseas study programs. They are given an "experimental" status for 2015-16 academic year and reviewed after they have been in operation for at least one cycle:

- Intermedia Art in Athens – Colleen Choquette-Raphael (GEO Center Faculty-Led)
- Human Rights and Transitional Justice in Rosario – Will Johnson (GEO Center)
- ECNU Study China Summer Program – Kimberly Rose (GEO Center)
- Special Education in Mexico – Lillian Duran (GEO Faculty-Led)
- Trekking Through Italian History – Roxann Prazniak (GEO Center Faculty-Led)
- Documenting UO Life Abroad in London – Daniel Miller (GEO Center Faculty-Led)

Conditionally approved programs: After careful deliberation, the committee conditionally approved the following new overseas study programs. They are given an "experimental" status for 2015-16 academic year and reviewed after they have been in operation for at least one cycle:

- Nongovernmental Organizations of Southeast Asia – Dyana Mason (GEO Faculty-Led); pending recommendation toward 6 mandatory credits – revised and approved as a 6-credit course
- Sophomore Business in London – Collette Niland; pending recommendation to 6 mandatory credits – revised and approved as a 6-credit course
- Music, Art, and Culture in London – Sharon Paul; pending recommendation to extend the program length / increase the courseload, or lower the mandatory credits – revised and approved by increasing the courseload to match the 6-credit program

5. Briefly summarize the major work you believe this committee should undertake next year:

Next year the committee will review about 18-20 programs. Also, the committee will consider new program proposals submitted during the academic year, and programs where issues may arise during the year.

6. Briefly summarize the workload of this committee in hours per week:

The committee met 9 times during the past academic year. Meetings averaged 1.5 hours. On average, each committee member prepares the review materials for one to two programs.

This preparation involves reviewing program materials, student and faculty evaluations, and writing a summary. Program summaries can take three to five hours to prepare, in general. Therefore, committee members will spend about 20 to 25 hours during the academic year attending meetings and working on committee assignments.

7. Explain whether you think the current mission and structure of this committee is best serving the short and long-term goals of the university faculty.

Yes, this committee provides a useful and necessary review of foreign study abroad programs by an impartial cross-departmental body of faculty leaders, study abroad specialists, and administrative representatives. The committee can complete its mission effectively because of the diligent and insightful work of committee members, and the organizational support provided by the Office of International Affairs and Global Education Oregon staff.

This is a benefit for the short term goals of the University of Oregon and GEO by evaluating and reviewing current study abroad programs that affect current UO students and faculty. Global education and the study abroad industry is ever-changing, with new issues and opportunities to seize; it is, thus, of utmost importance to have an effective body of campus leaders in international education to bolster and improve upon the University of Oregon's study abroad portfolio, for the betterment of the faculty and student body alike.

As a bonus, committee members become better informed of the student opportunities for overseas study, and faculty opportunities for teaching abroad. OIA and GEO also benefit from faculty dialogue and economies of scale with regards to the faculty members connections and unique skills and knowledge in reviewing, discussing, and planning study abroad programs and international engagement at the University of Oregon. The committee is serving the long term goals of the university by providing a method for faculty and global education leaders from OIA to discuss, plan, and review all current and prospective study abroad programs, to enhance the international educational experience(s) the UO offers to current and prospective students, as well as innovative opportunities for current and prospective faculty members.

8. Explain what work of the committee you believe to be central and therefore should continue to be carried out by the committee.

All work currently carried out by the committee is useful, central to the mission of the committee and should be continued. It is crucial for all study abroad programs offered through the University of Oregon's Office of International Affairs & Global Education Oregon are carefully reviewed in cyclical fashion so as to evaluate, discuss, and address the needs of ongoing and new programs, for the betterment of the university and the student population as whole.

9. Explain what work might be best done elsewhere. Where do you suggest?

The committee works efficiently. Attendance issues do threaten to weaken the committees' ability to effectively and conclusively discuss and review study abroad programs. It could be suggested that if there are an estimated 10 meetings planned for the academic year than faculty reviewers may miss no more than 4 meetings, barring unforeseen circumstances. This would ensure a greater pool of diverse knowledge at hand each meeting to thoroughly review current and prospective study abroad programs.

In addition, we suggest the Senate seek to reappoint long time and/or internationally experienced/minded faculty, with faculty serving at least two years to develop, utilize, and benefit from, the institutional knowledge of study abroad programs and international education at the University of Oregon. We feel this will allow the Study Abroad Program(s) Committee to best evaluate and review study abroad programs for the betterment of the university.

Moreover, we suggest moving to increase student participation in the 2016-201 academic year, and beyond, by seeking out 1-2 driven and mature UO students with international educational experience(s) to attend each meeting in the same role as a faculty member of the committee. Without proper incentives, the SAPC committee lacks the ability to draw students to join and actively participate in the committee throughout the academic year. We adamantly feel the need for students with international educational experience(s) to participate in the Study Abroad Programs Committee so as to best evaluate study abroad programs with the student(s) unique perspective in mind.

Lastly, the university would benefit from the committee sharing their findings and knowledge of study abroad programs, where needed, to interested parties on campus, be they departmental or otherwise. Specifically, with departments who have a plethora of major-specific study abroad programs (i.e. Architecture) to work cohesively with Global Education Oregon to upgrade the health of the study abroad portfolio and work together where issues may arise with such programs.

We recommend this to effectively address issues as they arise or are foreseen; for example, this year there are minor issues regarding the study abroad programs for Architecture majors where some programs are experiencing lower enrollment due to the number of Architecture specific programs offered. The committee, and the Global Education Oregon office, feels the institutional knowledge of the committee members with regards to international education, ought to be utilized as needed by other on-campus parties or individuals when planning and/or addressing issues related to studying abroad and international education on a macro level.

10. Is there one or more committees you believe this committee could usefully merge with in the conduct of business?

No, the committee is appropriately focused and with a reasonable workload.
